#3 Compfight

<http://www.compfight.com>

This is an image search engine that will specifically look for CC licensed images on Flickr, and is perhaps more user friendly than the standard Flickr image search. Enter a search term, and choose from the drop-down in the left hand column...

The screenshot displays the Compfight website interface. On the left side, there is a search bar containing the term "geography" with a search icon and a count of "2,701 images". Below the search bar are several filter options: "Tags only", "All text", "Any license", "Creative commons", "Commercial", "Show originals", "Hide originals", "Only originals", "Safe", and "Unsafe". A yellow banner reads "Please respect all licenses!". Below this is a "Support by Ad Packs" section featuring "CS5, SG3 and You The Ultimate Website Development Team" and "SiteGrinder". At the bottom left, there is a "Website Photoshop Plugin" advertisement for "Photoshop CS5 and SiteGrinder 3. The ultimate". The main area of the page is filled with a grid of search results, including various maps, geographical photos, and diagrams. One map is labeled "EUROPE 1200" and another is titled "THE WORLD ACCORDING TO AMERICANS".

#4 - Simple Flickr CC Search Toy

<http://johnjohnston.info/flickrCC/index.php>

A brilliant little tool with tons of useful features made by John Johnston - I have been using this one for years.

#5 - Creative Commons Search

#13 - CC Comic to Explain

Sharing Creative Works is a new comic about Creative Commons. It aims to explain the basics of CC licensing as simply as possible to a general audience, including children. To make remixes and translations as easy as possible, the original artwork is in SVG format and all the assets are available for download. Please contribute!

This comic will also serve as the foundation of the documentation for the Sugar Licensing Activity, our collaboration with One Laptop Per Child. The final documentation and activity will be customized for each country's distribution, so please let us know if you have suggestions for making this document as culturally accessible as possible.

#15 - Remix Creative Commons videos

If you mark your YouTube videos as Creative Commons licensed then they become available to other users to remix using the YouTube Video Editor.

http://www.youtube.com/t/creative_commons

<http://www.youtube.com/editor>

The screenshot displays the YouTube Video Editor interface. At the top left, the YouTube logo and 'Video Editor' text are visible. A user profile 'tgb1978' is shown in the top right. The main interface features a search bar with a red box around the Creative Commons (CC) icon and the text 'search for CC licensed content here'. Below the search bar, a red-bordered box contains the text: 'Remix Creative Commons videos. Search for Creative Commons licensed videos above or check out one of the example videos below. Learn more >'. The interface shows a grid of video thumbnails with durations, a video player on the right, and a timeline at the bottom with music tracks like 'Instrumentals' Volume 1 by Arthur Russell. A 'Send Feedback >' link is also present.

CC licensed music - there's lots out there!
